Any competitive archer who has been fortunate enough to participate in a National Field Archery Association (NFAA) National Tournament held in the Washington State mountain hamlet of Darrington usually comes away telling friends and associates, "What a beautiful place to shoot an archery tournament!"

Indeed, Darrington, population 1,400, embraces the west side of the towering Cascade range, some 75 miles southeast of Seattle. At an elevation of only 554 feet above sea level, the town is surrounded by mountains, the highest being Whitehorse Peak at 6,852 feet.

Every third year since 1982, the Darrington Archery Club has hosted the NFAA Outdoor Nationals. This year, the event - which literally doubles the size of the town for about a week - is scheduled to take place July 24-28.

The Darrington Archery facility consists of 5 ranges of 28 targets each. Ranges and target butts are sponsored by individual archers, regional archery clubs and even some local businesses and civic organizations.

If you hadn't already guessed, the NFAA Outdoor Nationals are a pretty big deal for club members, civic leaders and just about anyone who has any connection with tiny Darrington, Washington.

That's why, when someone broke into the Darrington Archery clubhouse last week and made off with food, equipment and its stockpile of supplies for this year's big event, well, the club members were understandably devastated.

"They just nearly took everything," secretary-treasurer Candy Vincent told the Everett Herald newspaper.

At the start of 2013, the club had a bank balance of around $1,500, Vincent said. A 1993 Yamaha ATV that was stolen was worth at least $3,000, she figures.

The vandals/burglars also pushed over porta-potties, but left behind some things, like a public address system.

However, almost everything else - including a meat slicer, microwave oven, coffee and canned goods - was taken.

"It is a big deal. It's a very big deal," Vincent told Seattle's KOMO News. "Because that's the stuff we need to keep our tournament running and bring the people to Darrington."

The Snohomish County Sheriff's Office is investigating the break-in and theft. Currently there are no suspects or leads.

A website (<http://gogetfunding.com/project/darrington-archery-association>) has been set up for donations so the club can hopefully recoup some of its losses.

An artistic metal sculpture in Darrington called "A Family of Archers," depicts a male, female and youthful archer, bows drawn and aimed high.

And now, Candy Vincent and the Darrington Archers hope the people of Darrington and their national archery family will step forward to help them through this difficult situation.

For information on how a company, business or individual may assist the Darrington Archers, phone Dennis and Candy Vincent at 360-436-0282.
